The libel suit of Henry C. Bowen against the Brooklyn Eagle, founded upon the alleged interview between the plainting and one James McDermott and certain alleged defamatory articles published in their journal, came up in the Brooklyn City Court before Judge Mc. Cue yesterday. The defendant's counsel pressed for an adjournment on the plea of an important legal engagement elsewhere and the fact that Theodore Tilton, who would be a witness, was out of the State. The case was put over until one week from Wednesday.

The Graphic says that at the conclusion of the preceedings in this case Mr. Johnson, the attorney for the Eagle, approached Mr. Fullerton, attorney for Bowen, and said: "Does Mr. Bowen push this case for money, or what does he want?" Fullerton replied: "I don't know anything about that. My instructions are to push the case 'trial." Mr. Johnson added: "If mo'y can settle, let me know how mash is required for making a settlement." Mr. Fullerton rejoined, "No proposition of that kind must come from you." An hour later Bowen said, "There is no compromise possible. I have been maligned for a year by the Eagle, and I want to ascertain whether there is any justice for me in Kings county." He seemed very emphatic and determined to push the case to trial.

living on the Walker Mill road, came forward and made affidavit that Lawrence Beal, of Sixth street, below Millcreek, a young man only nineteen years father of her unborn child.

In conversation with Chas. E. Callahan, the Prosecutor, the defendant signified his willingness to marry the girl, and they were started on the hunt of a 'Squire to tie the knot. Before they had reached the door, in charge of Officer Hanrahan, the father of Beal stepped up and told the Judge that he would not give his consent to the marriage.

Said his Honor: "Would you rather have your son go to the Penitentiary than marry this girl?"

The father, a bluff old German, replied: "Take him off—take him off!" and walked indignantly away.

Here was a hitch. The trip to the Probate Court in search of a license was temporarily, at least, abandoned, and the case was examined.

The girl, under oath, stated that last March she yielded to Beal, actuated thereto by his repeated promises of a speedy marriage.

He, on the contrary, swears that he never promised to marry Miss Fowler.

Beal was held under $500 bonds, and the case continued.
